This book reassesses the contribution to international thought of some of the most important writers on international relations of the inter-war period. Since the publication in 1939 of E. H. Carr The Twenty Years' Crisis, these writers have been widely, and pejoratively, known as 'utopians' or 'idealists'. The impetus for the book was the feeling, partly brought on by recent reassessments of realism, and increasingly borne out by our research, that the 'idealists' were not as naïve in their ...
